Bullying can have lifelong negative effects on victims, so intervention and prevention are necessary to identify and stop individuals that are prone to bullying. This advocate training is designed to define bullying and educate the participant in the various types of bullying. At completion of the training, participants will be able to define bullying, identify the types of bullying, have an increased awareness of the locations where bullying is most likely to occur, and intervene in bullying situations before any verbal, emotional, psychological, physical, or social (VEPPS) damage is done to the victim.
