

When the person you spent your life loving and caring for dies you understandably feel an overwhelming sense of loss. This grief takes over your life and you wonder how you will be able to go on without them. I have felt this depression and grief ever since she passed. I know that I will never in this world touch her kiss her or hold her again. But I have come to understand that the most important aspect of our relationship is still there and for that matter always would be there. Our love for each other it will never die.
